

PARALLEL LIVES: IRISH KIN DOWN UNDER AND ABROAD

Pauleen Cass

You've done the footwork and traced your Irish ancestors back to their home place. Now what? When looking at church records or census data, have you considered whether all the siblings came Down Under (Australia or New Zealand) or if some went to "America", South Africa, Britain, or remained in Ireland. These questions become pertinent once you start trying to trace genetic cousins with DNA.

Have you considered the similarities and differences between the life experiences of these parallel migrations? This session will also trace some life journeys of family members to illustrate similarities and differences in different eras and bridge the past and the present.
