

Demonstrating a pathway for Local Government to achieve net-zero

Jonathan Linders, Hutt City Council

Hutt City Council produces a significant portion of the city's net emissions and is well-positioned to reduce these, in line with current global targets. Hutt City Council have demonstrated that this is largely achievable by 2030 by utilising available technologies. The 2020s will be a decade for deep emission cuts through rapid electrification and efficiency gains. Business-as-usual inertia is the greatest barrier to the global climate mission. However, Hutt City Council have shown that this can be overcome.
