Change the Street, Change the World: A Ministry for Cities

Janette Sadik-Khan makes a relentlessly optimistic, human-focused appeal for the soul of cities based on the principle that streets are a powerful instrument for confronting many of the world's mobility, economic, equity and climate challenges. The presentation takes the audience on a vibrant sweep through cities around the world, with inspiring stories of the transformative strategies to reclaim streets from cars and to reallocate them for people to live, work and play. Her message discusses the misplaced optimism that millions of people and city leaders have in electric and driverless cars, and how cities already have all the tools they need to transform their streets.
