

Taking a strength-based approach: what does that mean for my school?

Dr Denise Quinlan

Denise will discuss why embedding a strengths-focus is at the heart of building whole-school. She will review the evidence for working with strengths in schools, and share the varied ways in which educators are using strengths to connect, build relationship, and to empower students in their learning. She will explain why it's more important to have educators who can spot all kinds of strengths in students and each other, than it is to stick to a fixed list of strengths – and why teachers are the engine of a school's strengths focus.