

Why coaching should be part of your school's wellbeing strategy for students and staff

Professor Christian van Nieuwerburgh

Wellbeing is rightly gaining a higher profile within education institutions globally. Schools, colleges and universities should be places that enhance the wellbeing of the students and staff. In this keynote address, Prof. Christian van Nieuwerburgh will discuss how the latest thinking about the integration of coaching and positive psychology can inform the current debate about wellbeing in educational institutions. After making the case for the use of coaching to support the wellbeing of students, educators and staff, Christian will share some practical ideas and strategies that can be implemented immediately.
