Invitation

We are pleased to invite you to partner with us at the premier event on the Australian macadamia industry calendar - AusMac2024 - on the Gold Coast.

This hugely successful event attracts hundreds of delegates from both Australia and across the world; engaging businesses from every part of the supply chain.

This year, as well as a new venue - the Gold Coast Convention & Exhibition Centre - we are excited to announce several new initiatives and opportunities, including the dedicated Trade Expo Networking Sessions on both days, giving delegates uninterrupted access to exhibitors, and providing sponsors and exhibitors with greater opportunity for delegate engagement.

As well, The Innovation Lounge will give trade suppliers and researchers the opportunity to showcase their innovative new ideas, methods, products and technology that are focussed on improving our industry.

There'll be the usual fantastic mix of presentations, social networking, 2-day trade show and the very popular macadamia breakfast and gala dinner. Internationally acclaimed growers, researchers and industry experts will share their ideas and experiences, providing the latest results and technical information about macadamia research, best practice, on-farm innovation and management as well as global insights and marketing perspectives.

We have numerous partnership packages available, tailored to offer opportunities for branding and best value access to your market. Our event social media, app and website will provide you with ample opportunity to leverage your involvement and connect to all delegates before, during and after the event.

We are thrilled at the commitments already received from industry partners to sponsor, exhibit and contribute to the success of Ausmac2024 in support of the Australian macadamia industry, I look forward to seeing you all in October.

Australian macadamia industry snapshot

Our native wonder

- Macadamias are native to Australia, and first evolved in the rainforests of our north-east coast 60 million years ago.
- As a native species, macadamia trees are naturally adapted to the harsh Australian climate, and this trait is proving invaluable as supercharged weather patterns present extreme and rapid climatic variations.

World leader

- Australia's macadamia industry has grown exponentially in its relatively short history to become a world leader in terms of product quality and marketing.
- Macadamias are now the fourth largest Australian horticultural export and second-biggest nut export.
- Nuts play a vital role in Australia's horticultural export program, demonstrated by their export value of just over $1 billion to 12 months to June 2023. Almonds and macadamias represent the vast majority of Australia's nut export value at 93%.

Growers, regions, hectares and crop

- There are more than 800 macadamia growers across three states, producing around 50,000+ tonnes per year, and 75% of the crop is exported to more than 40 countries.
- Macadamias are grown along the eastern coast of Australia from NSW Mid North Coast in the south to the Atherton Tablelands in the north, and there are a few farms in Western Australia. Collectively Bundaberg and the Northern Rivers region produce around 80% of the Australian crop
- The Australian macadamia crop is growing steadily as plantings in new and established regions come into bearing. Of the 41,000 hectares of macadamias currently planted, approximately one third are still to come into commercial production.
- South Africa and Australia are the world's largest macadamia producers, followed by rapidly expanding production in China and Kenya.

Opportunities

- Macadamias represent less than 2% of global tree nut production.
- Global macadamia production is expected to triple to 500,000T in 2030 (compared to 2020). Established growing regions are expanding their plantings and emerging regions will feature significantly in future global production.
- Only 2% of the world's population is eating the recommended daily intake of nuts, representing an enormous opportunity to grow demand for Australian macadamias.
- With increased macadamia production comes greater surety of long-term supply, so food and beverage manufacturers can feel confident to invest in the development of new products containing macadamias.
- Growth is being driven by an increasing health-conscious consumer mindset and rising consumption by emerging markets within Asia. Consumers love macadamias and recognise they're a premium plant-based product that is healthy, indulgent, tasty and versatile, with a unique ability to elevate any meal or product they're added to.
- Our Australian provenance story adds a powerful layer to our messaging, especially considering 82% of consumers say origin is important to them when purchasing macadamia nuts.
