About Amanda Alassad-Bruun

Amanda is an experienced senior legal executive with a broad range of expertise across the following areas of law: property, development, commercial, procurement, probity, risk management, advisory, compliance and governance gained in both private and government sectors.

Amanda worked for private law firms (Abbott Tout, HWL Ebsworth, PwC Legal and McCabes) from 2002 to 2014, and became an in-house Government lawyer from October 2014 until present.

Amanda has been the key legal advisor to NSW Government agencies and state-owned corporations, including NSW Land and Housing Corporation, Property and Development NSW, Place Management NSW and Landcom, and has worked on many significant projects for the NSW Government to deliver revitalised precincts and a better outcome for the people of NSW.

Amanda combines strong technical knowledge with a pragmatic solutions-focused approach, in order to assist her clients in delivering the Premier's strategic priorities. She is known for her hands on approach and for finding practical, commercial solutions.

Over the course of her career, Amanda has developed high-performing teams and devotes time to mentoring and supporting junior colleagues and others within the Department.

Amanda is also an accredited career coach (through Executive Central).
