Feng Guo
Executive Director, Global Corporate Banking, J.P.Morgan

Feng Guo is an Executive Director of Global Corporate Banking in J.P.Morgan China and the general manager of Suzhou Branch for JPMorgan Bank (China) Co Ltd.

Prior to joining J.P.Morgan, he was the corporate assistant treasurer for Yanfeng Global Automotive Interior Company of SAIC group, responsible for treasury policy, financing and FX management across 19 countries. In his earlier career, Feng worked as treasury sales manager with Citibank and taught as associate lecturer at Macquarie University.

Feng holds a MSc degree from University of Oxford and a BComm (first class Hons) from Macquarie University.

Helen Sawczak
Senior Trade & Investment Commissioner – Greater China, New South Wales Government

Helen Sawczak is the Senior Trade and Investment Commissioner for Greater China for the NSW Government. She is the most senior representative of the New South Wales Government in China.

In this role Helen helps NSW businesses access the Chinese consumer market, and promotes international education, tourism and investment into NSW.

Helen started her career as a corporate lawyer at international law firms in Australia and overseas. After returning to Australia, Helen worked as in-house counsel, and then moved into executive management roles with major Australian companies, before being appointed as National CEO of the Australia China Business Council.

Helen studied Mandarin throughout her secondary and tertiary education, which included long-term study trips to Nanjing University and Fudan University in Shanghai.

Professor Rorden Wilkinson,
Deputy Vice Chancellor – Academic, Macquarie University

Professor Wilkinson joins Macquarie from the University of New South Wales where he was the Pro Vice-Chancellor, Education & Student Experience and Professor of International Political Economy. He is a passionate advocate for increasing access to higher education and a champion of the role universities play in transforming lives worldwide. His leadership interests lie in educational innovation, experiential learning, digital technologies, mental health and wellbeing, and the value of student participation in all aspects of university life.

Before joining UNSW, Professor Wilkinson was Deputy Pro-Vice-Chancellor, Education and Innovation, and Professor of Global Political Economy, at the University of Sussex, UK. Prior to that he was Professor of International Political Economy and Research Director of the Brooks World Poverty Institute at the University of Manchester, UK, where he was based for 17 years. He has held visiting positions at, among other institutions, Brown University, USA, Wellesley College, USA, and the Australian National University.

Professor Wilkinson is an expert on international trade, global governance, and international development with a particular interest in least developed countries, and institutional and global crises. He is also interested in the relationship between popular culture and global politics, both inside and beyond the classroom. Professor Wilkinson is also a Professor of International Political Economy within the Faculty of Arts.