

Kylie Walden
Director, Allin Towbars

Kylie joined the business in 2001 as the first sister to work alongside dad, initially handling accounts and payroll. During her tenure, she witnessed a significant transformation in the company's operations— from managing everything manually to implementing computer systems, printers, eftpos machines, and digital timekeeping.

These changes aren't the only ones Kylie has observed; she's also witnessed the shift from a male-dominated environment to a more inclusive and female-friendly workplace. This included the addition of a ladies' toilet, her sisters joining the company, and a broader representation of women in the workforce.

Her husband, Grant, has been part of Allin Towbars for the past 15 years, and their children have also been introduced to the family business, contributing during their school holidays.

Kylie transitioned from Accounts to Marketing and currently oversees both roles, in addition to managing the Customer Service team. She also takes pleasure in organising work functions for the staff, including activities like bowling, dinners, and Christmas shows.
