

Dr Katherine Graham

AFPHM Advanced Trainee

Katherine Graham is an RACP AFPHM advanced trainee and is in the final throes of her training. An advocate of continuing education, she has been a collector of degrees and post graduate qualifications, spanning the realms of science, medicine, clinical microbiology, and law (even being admitted at one time as a Barrister and Solicitor of the High Court of New Zealand). However, she finally realised, in a lightbulb moment while studying Public Health Law, that all roads really do in fact lead to public health. Having also worked for several years in clinical medicine, to fund her pursuit of academic challenge, she particularly enjoys being able to navigate and cross the divides of these diverse, yet often intersecting fields. With the exception of four years working in the UK, she has worked within the Aotearoa-New Zealand health system and knows it well. In her spare time, she enjoys picking up the children's Lego, lamenting lost sleep, and tries to throw in a bit of running, baking and gardening for sanity.
