

Tatiana Didier is a Senior Economist currently working at the Inclusive Growth and Sustainable Finance Hub in Malaysia.

Since joining the World Bank Group in 2008, Tatiana has played a leading role on a number of country and regional policy engagements related to corporate and MSME financing, competition and the growth of fintech in the financial sector, overall development of financial markets, and most recently, sustainable finance. She is the author of several World Bank flagship reports and her research, spanning topics in international economics, corporate financing, and global capital market development, is published in top field journals. Tatiana holds a Ph.D. in Economics from MIT.