David Shelton

Senior Transport
Specialist (Road Safety)
Asian Development Bank

David Shelton is a Senior Transport Specialist (Road Safety) with the Transport Sector Group of the Asian Development Bank. His role is to support ADB's transport projects to apply Safe System thinking for the best possible reductions in death and injury from road use, enhance road safety capacity within ADB and help build road safety management in ADB's developing member countries. David leads the Secretariat to the Asia-Pacific Road Safety Observatory.

David's experience covers road system management, regulation, policy and strategy. He has led the development of road safety strategy at state and national levels and contributed to capacity building in Safe System in public and private sector organizations internationally. He has a passion for building and supporting what is needed in multi-stakeholder settings to save lives in road transport.

Prior to joining ADB, David was a senior executive in government in Australia where he also co-founded a firm specializing in Vision Zero planning for road safety.
