

Catherine Herridge
CBS News Senior Investigative Correspondent

Catherine Herridge is an award-winning senior investigative correspondent for CBS News covering national security and intelligence. She joined CBS News in November 2019 and has conducted interviews with newsmakers like President Donald Trump, then U.S. Attorney General Bill Barr, then acting Secretary of Homeland Security Chad Wolf, and then Director of National Intelligence John Ratcliffe. Herridge has also contributed impactful reporting to various CBS News broadcasts and platforms, including major investigations into corruption among the highly-trained Navy SEALs and the toxic exposure of U.S. veterans after 9/11.

Herridge has previously reported on some of the most impactful national and international security stories of our time, including the 9/11 terrorist attacks from New York City, the military trials for the alleged suspects at Guantanamo Bay, Special Counsel Robert Mueller's Russia report, and the House impeachment proceedings. Herridge has also reported from Afghanistan, Iraq, Qatar, Israel, Northern Ireland, Russia, as well as the former Yugoslavia.
