

Kirstjen Nielsen
Secretary of Homeland Security (2017–2019)
President, Lighthouse Strategies

Kirstjen Nielsen is an internationally recognized expert and proven leader in addressing critical global security issues, including emerging threats, resiliency, and cybersecurity. Currently the founder and President of her second company, Lighthouse Strategies, Ms. Nielsen advises investors and technology companies on risks and resiliency, mission requirements, technology use cases, and the mitigation of potential threats or vulnerabilities posed by new technologies.

Ms. Nielsen has also had various roles in government and most recently served as the U.S. Secretary of Homeland Security. She is currently an Advisory Board Member of multiple technology companies, and a Member of the President’s National Infrastructure Advisory Council. Previously she served on the U.S. Secretary of Energy’s Advisory Board, Australia’s Cybersecurity Advisory Board, as Chair of the World Economic Forum’s Global Agenda Council on Risk and Resilience, and as a civilian expert at NATO. She holds a B.S. in Foreign Service from Georgetown University and a J.D. from the University of Virginia School of Law.