4S SYMPOSIUM

16 – 20 May 2022

VILAMOURA, PORTUGAL

ABOUT THE 4S SYMPOSIUM

The history of the 4S goes back to 1992 and has had an ever increasing international participation over the years. The maturity of the event is marked by the close cooperation with two other prominent Small Satellite conferences: the IAA Symposium on Small Satellites for Earth Observation (DLR) and the Small Satellites Conference (AIAA and USU). The information synergies and idea exchange originating from these close links ensure high standard of contributions and a very wide attendance.

PROGRAMME

Information Made in Space is the special topic of the 2022 Symposium. Authors are invited to contribute to this year's theme. As in the tradition of the 4S Symposium, the selected papers will be discussed in a dedicated session on the first day of the event.

The programme will also cover technical sessions as: mission and system analysis; applications such as Earth observation, science, telecommunication and navigation; new technologies at system, sub-system and component level, etc. A special session will be dedicated to Small Satellites access to space, addressing launchers and platform cross-compatibility.

VENUE & DESTINATION

Vilamoura is located on one of the finest beaches of the central Algarve. This small charming village is well-known for its mild weather and its pristine coast line facing the Atlantic ocean. Praia da Falésia is 5km away, while Praia de Vilamoura leads to the fishing harbour in Quarteira.

The historic city of Faro, the market town of Loule or the charming old quarter in Albufeira can be easily reached for a day trip.

For those interested in archeology, Lisbon to the north and Tarifa (Spain) to the south offer a full immersion into the layers of history accumulated through the civilizations inhabiting this part of Europe and dating back to the Phoenician settlements.

The Tivoli Marina Vilamoura Hotel is located in the centre of Vilamoura in the Algarve, next to the Marina and the beaches of Vilamoura and Falésia. This conference venue is 20 km from Faro International Airport and Faro train station. The Lisbon International Airport is about 264 km.
