FOREWORD LOCAL ORGANIZING COMMITTEE

WELCOME

We are thrilled to extend a warm invitation to join us at the European Congenital Cytomegalovirus Initiative (ECCI) Meeting. This highly anticipated meeting will take place on October 9-11 2024 in Leiden, in the inspiring Naturalis Biodiversity Center.

European Congenital CMV Initiative

In 2007, one of the first ever ECCI meetings took place in Maastricht, The Netherlands. It is striking how many topics from the agenda of that meeting will be discussed again this year: for example, the burden of disease, the screening of mothers and newborns, and vaccines. And yet, so much has changed. Today, ECCI stands as an official association, embodying a diverse, multidisciplinary, and international network of experts dedicated to combatting congenital cytomegalovirus (CMV) infection. With a clear mission statement and defined objectives, ECCI endeavors to promote excellence in both the diagnosis and treatment of this challenging condition. This meeting serves as a pivotal platform where members convene to discuss and refine strategies, aligning with ECCI's overarching goals. Through collaborative efforts, ECCI aims to drive innovation, improve patient outcomes, and ultimately mitigate the impact of congenital CMV infection on both maternal and child health.

Why sponsor ECCI?

ECCI 2024 invites you to Leiden, the Netherlands, for a dynamic meeting of congenital CMV experts from diverse backgrounds and countries. This meeting will attract clinicians of multiple disciplines such as pediatricians, obstetricians, ENT-surgeons, microbiologists and radiologists, as well as scientists in these fields. Young doctors and PhD students are also invited to interact with the experts and present their work. From distinguished researchers to frontline clinicians, this group of delegates will be shaping the future of congenital CMV care. This is the place to engage with key stakeholders, showcase your innovations, support early career researchers and shape global policies.

We eagerly await your arrival in Leiden for the ECCI 2024 meeting, where knowledge and collaboration, will converge to create an unforgettable experience.

ECCI's mission is to promote excellence in the diagnosis and management of congenital CMV infection.

PROGRAMME

Goals:

- » Promoting the multidisciplinary exchange of knowledge and ideas
- » Teaching young PhD students and doctors about the state of the art in the field of clinical diagnostics and care
- » Demonstrate what is known in the field of congenital CMV and what the knowledge gaps are that require attention in the future
- » To meet and talk to experts from all over the world
- » Present more basic or translational research that may influence our clinical policy
- » Discussing the advantages and disadvantages of implementing national intervention policy

How we achieve these goals:

- » A separate symposium (Wednesday afternoon) on State of the Art in clinical diagnosis and care for congenital CMV. This symposium is open to clinicians (in training), but is also included in the registration of the ECCI meeting
- » Inviting experts to the symposium and for keynote lectures
- » Facilitating oral and poster presentations for young researchers and clinicians
- » Sufficient time within and outside the program to discuss and enter into collaborations

Main topics

- 1 Pathogenesis and prognostic markers
Pathogenesis at the maternal-fetal interface, prognosis of long-term outcome by imaging (ultrasound, MRI), prenatal and postnatal prognostic markers, (neuro)pathogenesis, inner ear pathogenesis, results from European Registries
- 2 Vaccines and Primary Prevention
Prevention, awareness, hygienic measures, immunoglobulins, vaccines, vaccine modelling.
- 3 Screening -prenatal and (targeted) neonatal screening
Disease burden, long-term outcome, prenatal screening, (targeted/universal) neonatal screening, saliva, DBS, cost-effectiveness, national policy, ethics
- 4 Prenatal and postnatal treatment
Secondary prevention, fetal therapy, postnatal antiviral therapy, (inter)national guidelines

The programme will be published at regular intervals on www.ecci.group

LOCATION AND VENUE

Leiden The city where history and innovation unite

Leiden is a city with a rich history and academic excellence. Recognized for its picturesque canals, historic architecture, and vibrant atmosphere, Leiden captivates visitors with its unique blend of tradition and modernity. In addition to its historical and cultural charm, Leiden is recognized for its commitment to innovation and research. The city's Bio Science Park, one of the largest in Europe, is a testament to its dedication to advancements in the life sciences.

ACCESSIBILITY OF Leiden

Situated in the heart of the Netherlands, Leiden boasts excellent accessibility for both national as international visitors. Whether arriving by plane, train, or car, the city provides seamless transportation options.

BY PLANE:

Leiden is well-connected to major international airports, making air travel a convenient option. Amsterdam Airport Schiphol is approximately 20 minutes away by train. From Schiphol, visitors can easily reach Leiden via frequent train services, ensuring a swift and straightforward connection.

BY TRAIN:

Leiden's strategic central location positions it as an easily accessible hub for travellers, particularly by train. The efficient Dutch railway system allows you to reach prominent cities swiftly. Within just over 30 minutes, the train can transport you to bustling metropolises like Amsterdam or Rotterdam. Moreover, Leiden's connectivity extends beyond the Dutch borders. With less than 3.5 hours of train travel, you can venture to the enchanting city of Paris.

BY CAR:

For those traveling by car, Leiden is situated near major highways, allowing for convenient access from various directions. The city provides well-maintained roadways and ample parking facilities, facilitating a comfortable journey for visitors by car.

NATURALIS BIODIVERSITY CENTER

Experience an exciting blend of cutting-edge research and the wonders of nature at Naturalis, the chosen venue for the European Congenital Cytomegalovirus Initiative (ECCI) Conference in Leiden.
