

Dr Janice Newsome

United States of America

Dr. Janice Newsome grew up in Jamaica.

While she had few possessions as a child, Dr. Newsome was blessed with a strong mind and a desire to help others. When she was a teenager, Dr. Newsome migrated to Brooklyn, New York to complete her education. After high school, Dr. Newsome completed a BS/MD program at City University of New York and Mount Sinai School of Medicine. After medical school, Dr. Newsome completed her residency in Diagnostic Radiology at the Medical College of Virginia. Following the completion of her residency, Dr. Newsome completed a fellowship in Interventional Radiology at the prestigious Miami Cardiac & Vascular Institute.

Dr. Newsome is a wife, a mother, and has board certification in Interventional Radiology/Diagnostic Radiology. Prior to joining the faculty at Emory University School of Medicine in July 2015, Dr. Newsome was in private practice in Virginia for fifteen years. While she enjoyed the private practice of radiology, Dr. Newsome has had a burning desire to teach since she was a young child in Jamaica.

Dr. Newsome's research efforts are focused on developing innovative ways to treat complex medical conditions that patients face daily and to develop new technologies and equipment, such as simulation, to assist in the education and training of the next generation of interventional radiologists. She is invested in health equity with a specific focus on maternal morbidity and mortality.

Dr. Newsome served as Chief/Division Director of Interventional Radiology and Image Guided Medicine at Emory University as well as Grady Health System until 2022. She is also the program director of the first interventional radiology training program in Tanzania. She is very active in the Society of Interventional Radiology and is serving her last year as Chair of the International Education Exchange Committee. She is the Co-Editor -in-Chief of Techniques in Vascular and Interventional Radiology (TVIR)

Dr. Newsome is not just a clinician; she is also an educator, an innovator, and one who lives to serve others. She believes that there are no limits to what a person can accomplish so long as they are willing to work hard and help others.
